

Office Memorandum • UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

TO : Chief, Intelligence School

DATE: 19 October 1960

FROM : Acting Chief, Management Training Faculty

SUBJECT: Weekly Activities Report No. 37
12 - 18 October 1960Supervision

Supervision #59 has been progressing at a good clip. The students have been consistently applying the material presented in class to their office problems. The six individuals from RID in the class have tended to keep discussion in areas that would hopefully solve their problems. As the problems are presented, I become less and less hopeful that discussions in class will create solutions but discussions continue nonetheless. RID is apparently faced with a personnel puzzle that includes inadequate desk or table space, triple shifts that overlap in time, uninteresting work, underpaid help, college graduates engaged in production line activity, rapid turnover, no rotation system, supervisors brought in from outside who have little knowledge or interest in activity. You think you have troubles?

General

STATINTL

1. Mr. [REDACTED] is still [REDACTED] working with the members of the Senior Management Seminar. First reports indicate that the participants are having a gloriously argumentative time and the professor from Harvard has his hands full.

STATINTL

2. Mr. [REDACTED] met with [REDACTED] on Tuesday to plan the construction of components for a new management game. The game is designed to embody a few ideas in the areas of coordination and directing and will be used in the management courses.

STATINTL